

Words and Music: Bill Roper
Copyright 1980

Legends

C                    Am                    G                    E
Once upon a time, you could hear the Saturn's roar
F                    G                    Am
As it rose upon its fiery tail to space.
C                    Am                    G                    E
And once upon a time, the men that we sent out
F                    G                    Am
Landed in a strange and alien place.
G    E                    F
And as I watched them walk upon the moon,
C                    Am                    G                    E                    Am
I remembered Icarus, who flew too close to the sun.

Once upon a time, they tore the gantries down
And the rockets flew no longer to the moon.
And once upon a time, we swore that we'd return,
But it doesn't look like we'll be back there soon.
And as the moon shines down on the shattered launching ground,
I remember Apollo, who drove the chariot of the sun.

G                    C                    Am
And I wonder of the legends they will tell
G                    E                    Am
A thousand years from now.