Words and Music: Bill Roper Copyright 2005

The End of the World (As We Know It)

Am G D E7 You think you're living a normal day, Am G E7 A day just like so many before, Am E7 G D But how you gonna feel when the clock strikes twelve Am G Am And tomorrow isn't there any more? D Am They tell you look to the future, E7 D But what if there's no future to see? Am G D E7 The final chime marks the end of time Am G Am And eternity is ceasing to be.

(Chorus) Am G F This is the end of the world as we know it. Am G E7 This is the end of the river of time. F G С Em Am And today will go where the wind won't blow E7 Л And tomorrow is not on the line.

It was yesterday I stood on tomorrow's edge. I was gazing forward at the abyss, Watching entropy unwind in her robes of black And she tried to take me with her dark kiss. The river of time stood below me, Its water rushing over the brink. Thought I might survive if I took the dive, Hit the falls and I started to sink.

Yesterday I woke on tomorrow's day 'Cause tomorrow had not yet ceased to be. Tomorrow I will wake up on yesterday As the river flows away from the sea. For entropy is unwinding Taking our tomorrows away And I'll tell you yesterday of tomorrow's death 'Cause yesterday's tomorrow's today. I am lost in the river's flow For entropy has cast me away. And yesterday I'll remember you, But you will not remember today. I might still save the future If I only had a place I could stand, But day by day it all slips away And yesterday I'm starting again.

(Chorus twice)

AmGAmThis is the end of the world as we know it.